25 YEARS STORIONI TRIO

Bart van de Roer – piano

Wouter Vossen – violin (Laurentius Storioni, Cremona 1794)

Marc Vossen – cello (Giovanni Celoniatius, Turijn ca.1730-1740)

The Storioni Trio is widely regarded as one of the world's foremost piano trios. It was formed in 1995 and takes its name from the violin played by Wouter Vossen which was made by Laurentius Storioni in 1794.

In their first years together, the three musicians worked intensively with the Vermeer Quartet, violinist Isaac Stern, cellist Mstislav Rostropovich and Menahem Pressler, the pianist of the renowned Beaux Arts Trio. Winning the Kersjes Prize in 2000 helped get them off to a flying start.

This season, they are celebrating the trio's 25th anniversary. 'We're still as enthusiastic as we were 25 years ago,' says Wouter Vossen. 'We're constantly driven forward by our enthusiasm for the next step, which is usually rooted in a musical angle. It's really energising.'

Over the last quarter of a century, the Storioni Trio have found their own sound and colour. Their concerts are as incisive as their rehearsals are intensive. These are musicians whose aim is to go further than just the music; they want to tell a story. The belief that music can bridge divides inspires them to open up this living music so it can be enjoyed by as wide an audience as possible.

The social aspect of how music is experienced is seen as essential by the Storioni Trio. Together with their audience, they enjoy the interaction that takes place not only in the concert hall but also outside it. The trio often play in unique spaces and at extraordinary locations so they can take their audience with them on a voyage of discovery.

The Storioni Trio's repertoire is wide, ranging from classical to contemporary works, from Haydn to Aho. Beethoven occupies a special place in the musicians' hearts: 'He continually challenges us to rediscover what his music is about and where our personal boundaries lie.' The ensemble has performed the cycle of all Beethoven's piano trios several times, using both period and modern instruments.

Triple concerto specialists

The triple concerto repertoire for piano trio and orchestra, the most famous example of which is Beethoven's Triple Concerto, has become a speciality of the Storioni Trio. They have themselves commissioned a considerable number of triple concertos from composers including David Lang, Kevin Volans, Willem Jeths, Nico Muhly, and Kalevi Aho.

The trio's repertoire also comprises triple concertos written by Casella, Juon, Martinů, Moor and Voříšek, among others. Their recording of Beethoven's Triple Concerto received glowing reviews in the international press and was crowned Editor's Choice by Gramophone magazine and chosen as CD of the week by BBC Radio 3.

Their triple concerto repertoire ensures the Storioni Trio is a welcome guest of prestigious orchestras and conductors. The trio has worked with over 35 orchestras, including the German Radio Philharmonic Orchestra, the Dortmund Philharmonic Orchestra, the Munich

Chamber Orchestra, the Württemberg Chamber Orchestra Heilbronn, the Irish Chamber Orchestra, the RTÉ National Symphony Orchestra, the Britten Symphonia, the Hong Kong Philharmonic Orchestra, the Orchestra of the Eighteenth Century, the European Union Youth Orchestra, the Antwerp Symphony Orchestra; and with conductors including Jaap van Zweden, Philippe Herreweghe, Martyn Brabbins, Otto Tausk, Olari Elts, Antony Hermus, Kees Bakels, Kenneth Montgomery, Jan Willem de Vriend and Pablo Gonzalez.
